Col. W. M. Pelton, Tilden's nephew who made an infamous name in the United States in being his Uncle's trusted man in his efforts to bribe his way to the Presidency, is dead.

Hancock is a millionaire and knows good money from bad. When the rebellion broke out he was sharp enough to perceive that greenbacks were better than confederate scrip. Therefore why not make him President?

Hancock tells Tilden he wishes th present campaign run as Tilden run the last. Tilden at once sends a hundred thousand dollar check to the National Democratic Committee. Dr. Miller and Nels. Patrick of Omaha, are advised to hold themselves in readiness for orders to move on Oregon.

Gilbert H. Collins, a prominent busi ness man of Omaha, who the papers of that city say, has been indulging freely in the use of intoxicating liquors of late, bought a case of bottled beer on Saturday evening last, took it home, drank a bottle, went into his bed room and deliberately blew his brains out with a pistol shot.

It is reliably reported that the Democrats in "Old Virginia" are to split up, that the Democratic electoral tickets will be placed in the field, and thus makes chances more than likely Garfield will carry that state. The old "Republican" soldiers wont swallow Hancock. He caused too much cold lead to be thrown among them.

Gen. Grant comes to the front in the matter of the report that he was for Hancock. He was a class-mate of Hancock's at West Point, and like a true soldier speaks well of the man. He says: "Hancock's personal and military record are good. The record of the party running him is bad," "Grant wrote that!" It is short and to the point.

Senator Hoar said. "Hancock is the mask of the Democratic party." But the mask cannot perform its office. The thoughtful honest citizen will look bebehind the mask, and behind deceitful platforms. That party can only be understood truly by looking at what it has done, what it has tried to do, what it is now doing in the "solid south," to the deliberate utterances of its Senators and members of Congress. These constitute the test by which Democracy must be judged, and not by the candidate or plarform gotten up for the emergency of an important election. A large majority of the people, we think will not be fooled by the Democratic

When Hancock was placed in command in the south he at once inauguundo the generous policy of Lincoln, Grant, and the Republican party; and upon the issues thus raised the Republicans elected Gen. Grant by an overwhelming popular majority. That work of Hancock cherished in the minds of the south for twelve years made him the present Democratic That issue, upon which Grant was elected is brought fresh before the people to-day; and Republicans, loval men and veteran soldiers are asked to indorse order No. 40, Hancock's southern policy, and the very things they overwhelmningly condemned in 1868, and old soldlers should not forget all this.

What made Hancock popular with the Democrats? His policy while in command at New Orleans of the department of the Southwest in 1868. What was that policy?

How soon we forget. That policy was to exterminate the Republican party of the south-by counteracting the policy of Sheridan and Grant, which made white Republicans subject to murder or banishment, kept all Republicans from the polls and gathered about Hancock the leading white leaguers and bulldozers as his friends and advisers. It was the policy then his head.-Sheridan Post. in a solid south and his present posi-
